Advocating for the development of skilled workers in WA

Who We Are & What We Do

Operating since 1992, we are one of eight industry training advisory bodies recognised in WA's Vocational Education and Training Act 1996. We provide strategic insight and direction to the Department of Training and Workforce Development (DTWD) and the State Training Board (STB) on matters relating to changes impacting industry, emerging influences on workforce development, skills shortages and training issues.

We represent and advocate for industry to support skills development and access to relevant training services and to optimise employment opportunities and the availability of appropriately skilled labour across each of our industry areas.

Our work informs the State Training Plan, WA's Vocational and Education Training policy and funding priorities based on identified priority occupations, and the establishment and variation of traineeships.

Stakeholder Engagement

Our team works closely with a range of stakeholders forming long standing relationships which enable us to facilitate industry, government and training organisation collaboration, partnerships and networks. We develop reports, briefs and submissions based on industry consultation and research to profile industry sectors and inform government on workforce development, education and training.

Our engagement strengthens the information we provide to inform government policy, helps identify and develop innovative approaches to industry skill development and brokers training solutions for industry with registered training providers.

Workforce Training & Capability Building

We advocate for quality training to meet industry-specific needs and a skilled and flexible workforce. Engagement with industry stakeholders allows the Training Council to identify the skills and workforce development priorities within these industry areas and develop a comprehensive whole of industry approach to sustainable training and capability building of workers.

We keep industry advised of training developments within our sector, including new apprenticeship and traineeship opportunities and school-based training arrangements.

Industry Coverage

Our coverage spans a broad range of industry groups including:

- Financial and Insurance
